Inside an immersive space where design and material meet, you will enter an environment designed to stimulate the senses and slow down the pace: the Winter Garden. Here, you will be welcomed by a perfume artist who will guide you in creating a fragrance built around your perceptions.

You will begin by exploring a selection of bases and essential oils, observing how each note develops and combines with others. Through successive trials, you will build your formula, testing it directly on your skin and refining the balance between the different components. Each choice becomes part of a process that unites intuition and sensitivity.

During creation, the perfume ceases to be something external and becomes something you recognize as your own. And when the composition is defined, a fragrance takes shape that reflects your way of perceiving and expressing yourself.
